The Purpose of the Creation Account

Steven Hunter (Part 2)

Anytime a temple was defiled, the deity departed from it until it was once again cleansed (cf. Ezek. 8:6; 10:18–19; Ps. 78:58–60), so when sin polluted the earth, God casts man out of the Garden and has the tree of life guarded by cherubim (Gen. 3:22–24). Heaven and earth are no longer joined, but separate. This isn't the totality of the separation, however. God still walked with man, though, because even after such we see the two in one another's presence: God distinguished offerings between Cain and Abel (Gen. 4:3–16); Enoch walked with God (Gen. 5:24); Noah walked with God (Gen. 6:9). However, as time went on God destroyed (cleansed) the earth by flood, though the earth itself remained, and earth became its own realm and heaven separate from it.

For this they willfully forget: that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of water and in the water, but which the world that then existed perished, being flooded with water. But the heavens and the earth, which are now preserved by the same word, are reserved for fire until the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. (2 Peter 3:5–7)

After the flood, we read about the first ever mention of an altar (Gen. 8:20). Just because this is the first mention of an altar doesn't at all mean that sacrifice hadn't taken place before, because God made garments from animal skins to clothe Adam and Eve and hide their shame (Gen. 3:21). Also, Abel brought offerings of animal fat to God (Gen. 4:4). What's different here is that whereas Abel brought his offering to God, Noah presents an offering on an altar to God instead of in person. The close communion of humanity with God was cut off after the flood. Heaven and earth are not one any longer, but separate realities. God comes down to earth when it suits Him (Gen. 11:5), but otherwise, He remains in heaven separate from humanity and our corruption.
